“We are continuing to implement our CSR road map for 2018-2023 in keeping with the thirteen objectives we have set ourselves in terms of social, societal and environmental responsibility. Evaluation by external observers is part of this process, so the fact that the tangible progress we have made has been rewarded by ISS ESG reinforces our determination to step up our efforts and demonstrate that a mining and metallurgical company can be exemplary when it comes to processing the earth's resources,” said Virginie de Chassesey, Head of Communications and Sustainable Development. “In this troubled period of global pandemic, it is even more essential that we should continue with our efforts, particularly in the area of solidarity with local communities and environmental preservation.”

As a reminder, ISS ESG belongs to the institutional shareholder services group ISS. The ISS ESG Corporate Rating system is constantly revised and updated to cover all relevant environmental, social and governance issues. Assessment of this performance is based on approximately 100 criteria, selected specifically for each sector according to their relevance.
